COURSE MODULES

Communicating Effectively

All healthy relationships begin with effective communication. With all of the channels for communication that students have today, it's easy for meaning to get lost in translation. Students need to know that what gets said is just as important as how it's said. In this module, students learn strategies for communicating effectively. From identifying communication barriers to interpreting subtle social cues, students will learn how to better express their thoughts, opinions, and feelings towards others.

Resolving Conflicts

While not all conflicts are avoidable, they are all resolvable. Whether it's an internal conflict or a conflict with one or multiple people, the strategies for resolution are simple. After taking this module, students will be able to recognize types of conflict and why they occur, as well as identify the best solution to each conflict type. Through all of this, students will recognize how strong relationships depend on the skillful exercise of conflict resolution, rather than the unskillful practice of conflict avoidance.
